MONTHLY COMPETITIVE BRIEF / SAMPLE

What did Wild One do this month?

This is a sample, not a real client. The substance is real, the names are not. PawLux Co. is the illustrative customer. The four companies tracked here are fictional. The patterns we look for are the ones we look for in every brief.

CLIENT	PERIOD	PREPARED BY
PawLux Co. (sample)	April 2026	rivalDrop

01 / EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

What's the headline this month?

Three things that move the needle. Each one is a question with an evidence-backed answer. Where we're not sure, we say so.

NOTE 01 · PRICING captured 2026-04-12

Did Wild One actually drop their leash price?

Yes. Bolt Leash went from $68 to $55, a 19% cut, and the new price showed up in a Meta ad campaign within 48 hours. They also nudged three other SKUs down: harness M ($78 to $72), collar M ($45 to $42), travel carrier ($145 to $125). Four cuts in one week is unusual for them, where a normal cadence is a single move per quarter.

We're 95% sure this is a real position move, not a flash sale. The thing that would tell us we're wrong: a snapback to $68 in early May.

NOTE 02 · PRODUCT captured 2026-04-08

Did Zee.Dog open a new front?

Yes. They shipped their first apparel SKUs: a $34 bandana set (sold out in 48 hours) and a $49 raincoat. The accompanying paid push ran on Meta and TikTok, with three sponsored reels via @dogsofinstagram averaging 380K views each.

Whether this becomes a real strategic problem depends on whether the second drop lands in May. PawLux has zero apparel SKUs today; the category is a $2.4B annual market growing at 8.2% a year. That's not a number we can do anything about by Friday.

NOTE 03 · CONTENT 2026-04-03 → 2026-04-21

Did Fable Pets do anything we should react to?

Quietly, yes. Three long-form guides published over three weeks, ranking already for keywords PawLux has no content on: `12,100/mo` for "best dog leash," `4,400/mo` for "harness training puppy," `2,900/mo` for "ceramic dog bowl."

The threat is not the bowl they launched. It's the inbound traffic those guides will start to capture, week by week, for the next eighteen months.

02 / MARKET LANDSCAPE

What does the niche look like in April?

Premium pet accessories. Four brands tracked, four bets on the table. Here's the shape of the field this month.

Premium pet accessories is a small, brand-led market. Buyers stay loyal once they pick a flag to follow. The trick is which flag they pick during the first six months of pet ownership; after that, the same buyer comes back two or three times a year and rarely shops around. So the live game is not stealing customers from the rival next door. It's catching the next puppy owner before they decide whose leash to buy first.

Four brands cover the bulk of the market PawLux competes in. Wild One is the closest direct rival, sharing both price band and brand voice. Zee.Dog plays a step below on price and a step above on social reach. Fable Pets is the quietest of the four and the most patient: lower spend, longer-form content, more vet partnerships. Each one, in April, made one move worth watching.

CATEGORY, US 2026	PREMIUM TIER SHARE	APPAREL SUB-CAT	PAWLUX DR
$8.4B	~28%	$2.4B	42
pet accessories · est.	avg basket $40+	+8.2% CAGR	domain rating, ahrefs

Where each brand sits

BRAND	AVG SKU PRICE	IG FOLLOWERS	TIKTOK	POSITION
PawLux	$75	34.2K	8.1K	mid-premium, design-led
Wild One	$67	287K	45K	mass-premium, undercutting
Zee.Dog	$65	412K	92K	street-style, social-led
Fable Pets	$78	52K	12K	premium, content-led, vet-adjacent

> A useful mental shorthand: Wild One is fighting on price, Zee.Dog is fighting on reach, Fable is fighting on time. PawLux is fighting on shelf-feel. Each of those bets requires a different kind of patience.

03 / COMPETITOR · WILD ONE

Why is Wild One cutting prices, and is it real?

Think of it as a poker raise. They've put more on the table than feels comfortable; they want you to fold something in return. The question is whether they have the chips.

What we saw

Four published price changes inside the same week, all downward. The headline cut was the Bolt Leash, from $68 to $55, paired with a recycled-nylon material upgrade and a fresh ad campaign. The ad copy went further than usual, quoting a price comparison directly: "Why pay more? Same quality, now $55." Wild One typically avoids head-to-head comparison language. They used it twice this month.

What it might mean

Three plausible reads, in rough order of how confident we are:

- Inventory clearance ahead of summer cycle (~60%). The cuts cluster on SKUs we'd expect to refresh in May. The recycled-nylon angle reads like a rebrand of older stock.
- Permanent reposition to undercut PawLux (~30%). The "why pay more" copy and four cuts in one week point this way, but four cuts is also consistent with a clean-out.
- We can't tell yet (~10%). Some of these moves could reverse if the inventory thesis is right.

The thing that would resolve it: where the prices sit on 2026-05-15. If Bolt Leash is back to $68, it was theatre. If it's still $55 and harness M is still $72, it's a real reposition.

PRICE MOVES	AVG SKU PRICE
4	$67
in one week, all down	down 9.2% mo/mo

PAID ADS (APR)	IG GROWTH
8	+2.8%
$15K–23K est.	week of 2026-04-21

Field notes

2026-04-12 Bolt Leash $68 → $55 on the public PDP.

2026-04-13 New Meta ad set live with the $55 price.

2026-04-15 Harness M $78 → $72; collar M $45 → $42.

2026-04-17 Travel Carrier $145 → $125.

2026-04-19 "Spring Essentials Lookbook 2026" published; ranked p.2 for "dog spring accessories."

> A field note worth keeping: when a rival breaks their own copy convention, treat it as a stronger signal than the price change itself. Prices move for many reasons. Voice changes for one reason: they want to be heard.

04 / COMPETITOR · ZEE.DOG

Is Zee.Dog opening a second front?

It's like watching a chess player castle. The position changes shape. The same pieces are now defending different squares.

What we saw

On 2026-04-08, Zee.Dog launched two SKUs in a category they had never sold in: pet apparel. The first was a Neon Bandana Set, three pieces for $34. The second was an Urban Raincoat at $49, with a waterproof shell and reflective trim. Both shipped with a co-ordinated paid push: four ads on Meta and TikTok, and three sponsored reels with @dogsofinstagram (4.2M followers), each averaging 380K views.

The bandana sold out within 48 hours. The raincoat is still in stock at the time of capture but has visibly lower social engagement. The rest of Zee.Dog's catalog held prices steady; this is not a category-wide move, it's a category extension.

Why it matters

Pet apparel was a category Zee.Dog used to mock in their content. They sold accessories. Now they sell apparel. The brand is repositioning around "what does your dog wear" rather than "what does your dog use." That's the kind of shift that pulls product roadmaps for a year.

PawLux has no apparel SKUs. If the second apparel drop lands in May and sells through, the category becomes one PawLux is losing by default rather than by choice.

NEW SKUS
2
first apparel pieces

LAUNCH SELL-THROUGH 48 hr
bandana set, sold out

INFLUENCER REELS
3
avg 380K views

TIKTOK GROWTH
+4.1 %
fastest in the set

Field notes

2026-04-08 Apparel category appears in nav; two SKUs live.

2026-04-09 Bandana Set listed as low-stock by 11am ET.

2026-04-10 Bandana Set marked sold out; restock date TBD.

2026-04-11 @dogsofinstagram reel published; 412K views in 48hr.

2026-04-22 "Street Style for Dogs" trend report on the blog.

> What we don't yet have: reorder data on the bandana, conversion data on the raincoat, and any signal on whether a second apparel drop is in the pipeline.

05 / COMPETITOR · FABLE PETS

What is Fable Pets building, quietly?

It's the SEO equivalent of planting trees. You don't see the canopy for a year. Then one day there's a forest where the asphalt used to be.

What we saw

Three long-form guides published over three weeks. One product launch (a $45 ceramic bowl with a lifetime warranty). One Instagram Live with a veterinarian. No price moves, no new ad creative beyond responsive search.

From a glance, this is the quietest competitor in the set. From a search-traffic angle, it's the loudest. The three guides target keywords with a combined search volume of `19,400/mo`: 12,100 for "best dog leash," 4,400 for "harness training puppy," and 2,900 for "ceramic dog bowl." PawLux has no content for any of the three.

Why it matters

The threat isn't the bowl. It's the inbound traffic those guides start to capture, week by week, for the next eighteen months. SEO compounds slowly and quietly; by the time it's visible in the analytics, the rival has been ranking for six months.

Fable's domain rating sits in the same neighborhood as PawLux (DR 42). Their content is well-optimized but not hard to match. A response post for "best dog leash" would take about a week to commission and 8–12 weeks to start ranking.

Content captured this month

TITLE	VOL/MO	DATE
Harness Training Your Puppy	4,400	2026-04-03
Best Dog Leashes for Every Adventure	12,100	2026-04-12
Why Ceramic Bowls Are Safer for Dogs	2,900	2026-04-21

Other notes

2026-04-15 Forever Bowl ($45 ceramic, lifetime warranty) listed.

2026-04-18 IG Live with veterinarian on bowl materials. `2.1K` live viewers.

paid spend `~$4K–6K` on Google search, lowest in set.

> A small thing worth saying out loud: Fable's pace looks unimpressive month to month. It looks impressive year to year. The brand voice rule about cumulative effects matters here.

06 / PRICING INTELLIGENCE

Where is PawLux underpriced compared to peers, and where is it overpriced?

Six core SKUs. Four competitors. One table. The signal is in the deltas, and the deltas tell a story this month.

CATEGORY	PAWLUX	WILD ONE	ZEE.DOG	FABLE	PAWLUX RANK
Standard Leash	$67	$55 ↓$13	$52	$59	4 of 4 (highest)
Harness (M)	$78	$72 ↓$6	$65	$89	3 of 4
Collar (M)	$45	$42 ↓$3	$48	$52	2 of 4 (cheapest)
Travel Carrier	$145	$125 ↓$10	$139	$155	3 of 4
Dog Bed (L)	$89	$85	$79	$95	3 of 4
Waste Bag Carrier	$24	$22	$28	$19	2 of 4 (cheapest)

How to read the deltas

After the Wild One cuts, PawLux is the most expensive option in 4 of 6 core categories, up from 2 of 6 last month. That's a real shift. PawLux's position has moved from mid-premium toward premium. Whether that's a problem depends on whether buyers see the gap as quality-justified or price-inflated.

The standard leash is the most exposed. Heritage Leash is at $67, Wild One's Bolt Leash is now at $55, and the Wild One ad copy makes the comparison explicit. A buyer reading both PDPs side by side has to decide that the PawLux leash is worth $12 more, with no help from the ad copy on either side.

Where the position bar sits, by average SKU price

> If Wild One holds these prices through May, the gap becomes structural. If they snap back, this was a brief skirmish. Don't move PawLux's prices on the strength of two weeks of data.

07 / MARKETING & DISCOVERY

What are the rivals running, and where are they being seen?

Paid spend, content velocity, and search visibility. Three lenses on the same question: who is trying to be in the buyer's field of view, and how loudly?

Paid ads detected this month

BRAND	COUNT	PLATFORM	PRIMARY MESSAGE	EST. SPEND
Wild One	6	Meta, Google	"Spring into savings, 20% off all leashes & harnesses"	$12K–18K
Wild One	2	TikTok	"Your dog deserves better than basic" (lifestyle)	$3K–5K
Zee.Dog	4	Meta, TikTok	"New drop: street-style for your pup" (apparel)	$8K–12K
Fable	2	Google Search	"Vet-approved, design-forward" (brand)	$4K–6K

Content cadence

BRAND	POSTS	THEME
Fable	3	training, materials, lists
Wild One	1	seasonal lookbook
Zee.Dog	1	apparel trend report
PawLux	0	none captured

Social momentum (mo/mo)

BRAND	IG	TIKTOK	DELTA
Zee.Dog	412K	92K	+4.1%
Wild One	287K	45K	+2.8%
PawLux	34.2K	8.1K	+1.2%
Fable	52K	12K	+0.3%

Three things worth saying out loud

One, Wild One is spending three to four times what Fable spends on paid acquisition. They are buying attention the way Fable is earning it. Both work; neither is free.

Two, Zee.Dog's TikTok growth (+4.1%) is the fastest in the set, and it tracks with the apparel launch. The two are linked. Apparel is more visual than accessories, and TikTok rewards visual.

Three, PawLux published nothing this month. That's a choice; it costs nothing in April. It costs slightly more every month after.

08 / OPPORTUNITIES & THREATS

What's worth chasing, and what's worth bracing for?

Three openings, three risks. Each one cites the section upstream where the evidence sits. None of these is a recommendation; recommendations are on the next page.

Three openings

OPP 01 · PRICING GAP

Bundle the Heritage Leash before buyers shop side-by-side.

Wild One is now $12 cheaper on the directly comparable leash. A bundle (leash + collar at $89) sidesteps the comparison while keeping the price integrity. see pricing, p.07

OPP 02 · SEARCH

"Best dog leash" is a 12,100-search-a-month gap PawLux hasn't filled.

Fable just published one. PawLux's domain rating is in the same band. A 2,500-word guide from PawLux would likely rank inside three months.
see fable, p.06

OPP 03 · TIKTOK

UGC-style content is generating 3x the engagement on the category.

Zee.Dog's reels prove it works in this niche. A small test (three micro-influencers, six clips) is a low-cost read. see marketing, p.08

Three risks

RISK 01 · PRICING

If Wild One's price cuts hold, PawLux is the most expensive in 4 of 6 categories.

That's a position move from mid-premium to premium. It works only if the brand can carry the gap on its own. see pricing, p.07

RISK 02 · CATEGORY

If Zee.Dog's apparel sells through, the category becomes one PawLux is losing by default.

Apparel is a $2.4B annual market with no PawLux presence. Defaulting out of it is a decision either way. see zee.dog, p.05

RISK 03 · ORGANIC

Fable's compounding content quietly drains the top of PawLux's funnel.

One guide a month for a year is twelve guides ranking against PawLux's silent blog. The cost of waiting goes up every month. see fable, p.06

09 / RECOMMENDED ACTIONS

What's worth doing this month, in order?

Four actions. The first is the only one we'd flag as urgent. The others are worth queueing now and starting next week. Each one names what we're betting on and what could prove us wrong.

01

Ship a Heritage Leash + Collar bundle at $89.

Sidestep the head-to-head price comparison Wild One is running. Bundle protects the perceived value of the leash while offering a real saving (regular separate price $112). Run for three weeks with email and a small Meta budget.

PRIORITY: HIGH ● EFFORT: ABOUT A HALF DAY BETTING ON: WILD ONE HOLDS AT $55

02

Commission a "best dog leash" guide.

2,500 words. Genuinely comparative; include Wild One and Zee.Dog as well as Heritage. Optimize for the featured snippet. Aim to publish within two weeks; expect to see traffic in 8–12 weeks.

PRIORITY: MEDIUM EFFORT: ONE WRITER-WEEK + EDIT PASS

CAVEAT: SEO IS SLOW; THIS WON'T MOVE APRIL NUMBERS

03

Run a small UGC test on TikTok.

Three micro-influencers (10K–50K followers), six "day with my dog" clips. Budget $2K–3K. The test reads back in two weeks: if engagement matches Zee.Dog's pattern, scale; if not, stop.

PRIORITY: MEDIUM EFFORT: ~ONE WEEK TO SET UP

CAVEAT: MICRO-INFLUENCER ROI IS NOISY ON SIX CLIPS

04

Decide whether to enter pet apparel by end of Q2.

Don't launch in May. Do commission the sizing study and a pair of sample bandana designs that read as PawLux on the shelf. The decision point is "do we ship the second drop window," not "do we copy Zee.Dog's first drop."

PRIORITY: MEDIUM EFFORT: EXTERNAL STUDY + SAMPLE SOURCING

CAVEAT: APPAREL REQUIRES A DIFFERENT SUPPLY CHAIN

10 / WHAT WE DON'T KNOW

What this report can't tell you.

If we wrote a brief that made it sound like we knew everything, you'd be right not to trust it. Here's the honest list of what's missing or guessed.

01 We see Wild One's published prices, not their margin.
$55 on a leash could be a healthy promotion, a thin clearance, or a loss leader. We don't know which. The thing that would tell us is a financial filing or a leak; neither has happened.

02 We don't have first-party reorder data on Zee.Dog's bandana.
"Sold out in 48 hours" is a real signal but it could mean strong demand or a small launch run. The next data point is the restock and how fast it sells through.

03 Fable's IG Live had 2.1K viewers; we don't know if any of them bought a bowl.
IG doesn't share that data. A spike in Forever Bowl reviews in two weeks would be the indirect read.

04 Ad spend numbers are estimates, plus or minus 30%.
Public ad libraries report impressions in ranges, not dollars. Our spend column is derived from those ranges and category CPM benchmarks. Treat it as direction, not measurement.

05 We don't yet track who at each rival owns what.
Champion movement (which director just joined Wild One, which head of marketing left Fable) is a signal we're working on capturing. It's not in this brief.

06 Anything happening in private is, by definition, not here.
Slack threads, investor decks, internal product roadmaps. We don't have eyes there. We never will. If the rival reveals it later, we'll catch it the day they do.

11 / CLOSING & NEXT MONTH

How to read this brief next month.

A few ways to get more out of the report. Most of the value compounds when you read it in sequence; one quiet month often becomes the explanation for a noisy one.

01 Next brief due 2026-05-03.
Same shape, same length. The question on the cover may be different; the structure is the same. Keep this one in the same folder and read them side by side.

02 Add or drop a competitor any time.
Email reports@rivaldrop.com with the new name. We'll have it watched within 48 hours and reflected in the next brief.

03 The "what we don't know" page is the section we'd flag if we could only flag one.
It's where the report admits its limits. Read it first if you have ten minutes; it tells you which other pages to trust the most.

04 Mid-month requests are fine.
If a rival drops something hot on the 14th, you don't have to wait for May 3rd to hear about it. Reply to the brief email with the question; you'll have a one-page answer the next morning.

QUESTIONS ABOUT THIS BRIEF?

Reply to the email it came in on, or write to reports@rivaldrop.com. We read every reply, usually within a working day.

A reminder that this is a sample brief. PawLux Co. is fictional. The patterns and the structure are what we ship to real clients.